

Local 'shed' in top tourism awards

A Riverland accommodation business has been nominated for a national tourism award.

The Pike River Woolshed, at Lyrup, is a finalist in the TakeABreak.com.au Awards.

The self-contained accommodation business is run by local couple Andrew and Bronny Caire.

"We hold these awards to showcase accommodation providers who consistently do an outstanding job in meeting and exceeding their guests' expectations," TakeABreak.com.au chief executive officer Penny Parsons said.

"We felt there was a huge gap in the market for recognition in these specialist categories of boutique accommodation by the travelling public.

"By holding these awards and nominating the best of the best, it gives visitors to our site the confidence that they will find a range of truly outstanding accommodation in whatever category they are searching."

Finalists will be judged on information and service provided and personal guest feedback.

South Australian winners will be announced at the end of the month, while national winners will be named in November.
